Sirena Yachts announced its entry to the superyacht market in style when it unveiled details of the new Sirena 85 at a special event at the 2018 Miami Yacht Show. The new flagship is already in build and has naval architecture and exteriors by the great German Frers with Cor D. Rover supplying the interior design. The yacht's lines are an evolution of Sirena's signature sleek styling. A sea-friendly fibreglass hull and carbon superstructure will make it a robust but nimble beauty with low resistance and excellent fuel efficiency at all speeds. A choice of two interior layouts is being offered: four or five cabin arrangements both with a full-beam master suite on the main with terrace and private access to the dipping pool on the foredeck. Power comes from twin 1,400 hp MAN V12s which unleash a top speed of 25 knots and an astonishing cruising range of 2,500 miles at 10. www.sirenayachts.com
